

An aerial night photograph of Trondheim, Norway. The central focus is the Trondheim Spektrum arena, a large building with a distinctive wooden slat facade and a curved roof, illuminated from within. It is surrounded by lush green trees. In the background, the city of Trondheim is visible, including a prominent church spire and various residential buildings. The city is situated along a waterfront, with a harbor area filled with sailboats to the left. In the far distance, across the water, a small island with a lighthouse is visible under a dark, twilight sky.
